

Twelve months.
Eleven ships.

By Thursday.

The records all exist.

WHAT IS ASKED FOR

One routine. One year.

The routine test records for the emergency generator,
across the fleet.

In a hardback book.

Aboard the ship

Signed on the day, by name

The ship is between two ports

↵ CREDIT THE BOOK

The book is not the problem.

THE LOGBOOK

Works at sea

A name, at the machine.

THE AUDITOR

Wants the pattern

Twelve months, eleven ships.

② THE QUESTION NOBODY ASKS

So why not just type it in?

The book is the legal record. A copy makes two records that can disagree.

↳ THE ARRANGEMENT

Not a copy. The same event.

The routine becomes a job.

Its completion is the entry — recorded once.

🕒 WHAT WE DO NOT DO

Three limits, stated first.

- | 📄 We do not replace the statutory logbook
- | 📋 Your flag decides the record of record
- | 🕒 Somebody aboard still enters it

Try it on one ship.

Twelve months of one routine, on one machine — without asking the vessel.

If you have to ask the ship, you cannot produce it.

Evidence that exists only aboard is not evidence you can produce.
